How do I start a family tree?

- Gather your family documents that show the who, when and where things occurred. Births, deaths, and marriages.
- These documents will verify what you may already know, for example, a birth record for your mother will verify her birthdate.
- Getting information that you can verify is accurate is the best practice in starting your tree correctly
 - Write everything down, stories you may have heard, record birth dates, death dates.
- Fill out a family group and pedigree sheet to keep information together.
- Start the tree with you. Add your parents, then their siblings and your cousins. Then work on your 4 grand parents and follow the same path.

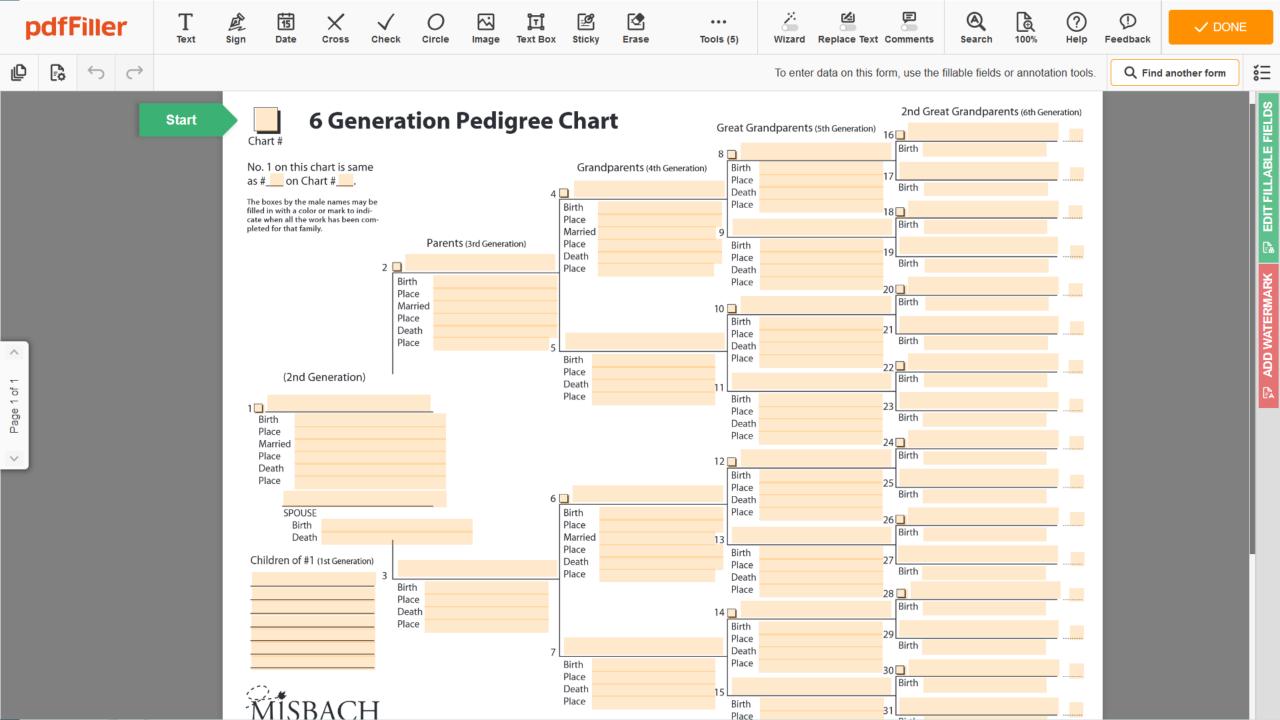

- A family group sheet helps you place information on to paper so you can refer to it as you build your tree.
- This sheet helps you keep track of one family at a time. Husband, wife and their children
 - It keeps your data in a simple format.
- My example on the next slide is readily available online and is a PDF file that you can fill in. They do have a free trial, but ultimately want you to pay for the products they offer.

Pedigree Sheet

- A pedigree sheet is used for your direct line only, you, your parents, your grandparents and so on.
- This does not show uncles, aunts, cousins or siblings.
- This is how most people start a family tree. but then move on to a full tree
- The further back you go the more direct ancestors you will need to add to the tree.
